Our goldsmith

The workshop will be an active cooperation between you and our goldsmith, Dagmar.

She will perform some of the steps in the process due to safety, and ensure that the result is a perfect set of rings — perfection in imperfection.

Sand work

The workshop starts with you choosing a model from our collection of wedding rings.

Making the casting mould of the model with sand, might remind you of handcrafting in school. However, it is important to work with accuracy.

The tools we are using allow us to work with very fine details.

Fire work

The actual casting is taken care of by Dagmar.

We use an acetylene torch to melt the metal at approximately 1.000 degrees.

The melted metal is poured into the sand form and after a few seconds it is possible to take out the raw ring.

This is the most exciting moment.

Metal work

Back on the work bench, the metal work is the final step.

Saw off excess material from your casted raw ring before you start filing.

The filing will bring out the distinctive shape and structure of the ring.

Select your favorite material

You can make your ring in different metals, such as yellow or white gold ⁽⁵⁸⁵⁾, or silver ⁽⁹²⁵⁾.

Diamonds or other stones can also be added. This work will be done by Dagmar after the workshop.
